synopsis

The frantic pace of life in Singapore has left many parents with barely sufficient time with their children. Time is precious and needs to be properly managed. Unfortunately, parents often spend most of this time tutoring or disciplining their children. This workshop covers how children learn and how parents can facilitate their learning by understanding children's learning styles.

benefit

- Be more aware of their child's learning needs
- Customise parenting approach to their child's personal learning styles outline

- Framework of Learning
- Learning Styles Mode
- Customizing discipline strategies to children's learning styles
- Communicating with your child according to his learning styles

speaker profile

After 4 years of teaching as a primary school teacher, Gurmit pursued her passion of working with young children. She set up her own child care centre at the age 28 and became the operator cum supervisor. Within a few years she operated several child care centers and provided consultancy as well. She has also assisted SEED Institute in auditing playgroups under the purview of People's Association. She has also been a field practicum supervisor for several preschool teacher training institutes. She has also lectured at Ngee Ann Polytechnic. Currently, she is an Associate Lecturer at a number of Pre-School Teacher Training Institutions supervising the Diploma in Teaching and Diploma in Leadership and Bachelor Programs.
